

Steck-Wompfel • Mork

Sheet 1 of 2 – body with head plate

Colour in • cut out • slot together – no glue at all

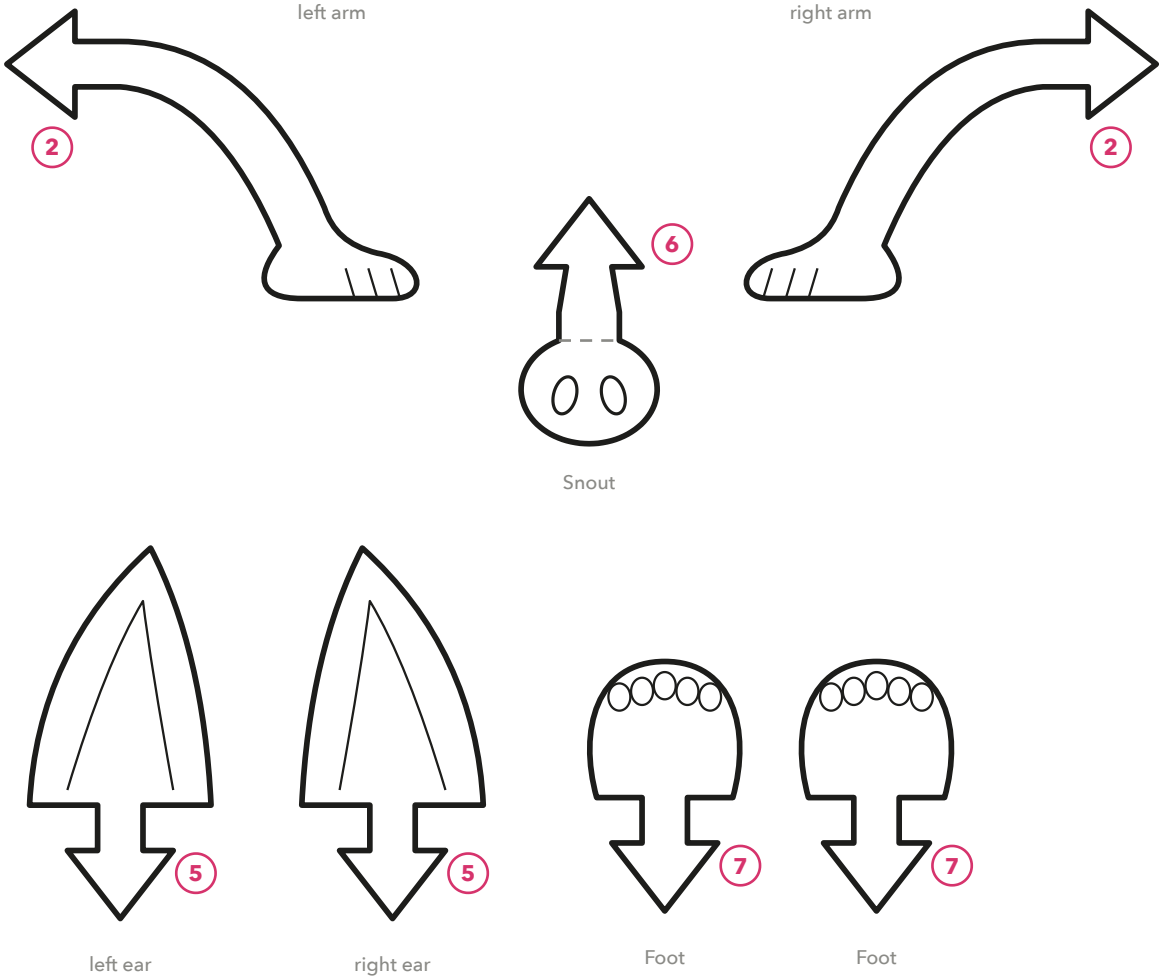

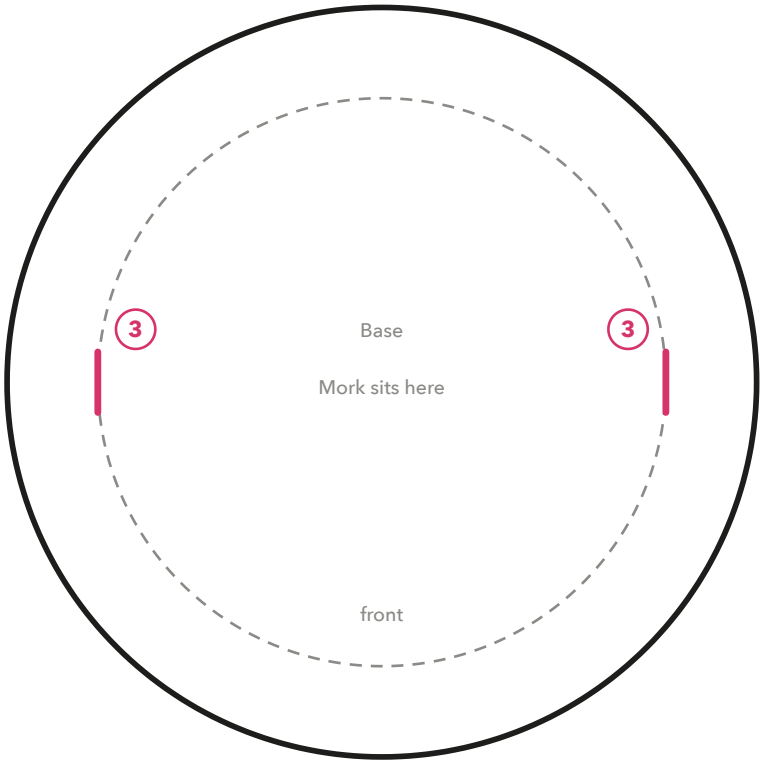

- cut
- slit (adults)
- - - fold
- ① arrow into same number

Steck-Wompfel • Mork

Sheet 2 of 2 - base, arms, ears, feet, snout

- cut
- slit (adults)
- - - fold
- 1 arrow into same number

How to put Mork together

Mork is the first Wompfel. He can enter a room without moving – that's why you have to sit him down.

1 Colour in

Mork is grey-blue with pale, flaking spots. Inner ears, snout, arms and feet are pink. Or something completely different – it's your Mork.

2 Cut out

Along all thick black lines. The arrows are part of each piece – don't cut them off! The head plate stays attached to the body.

3 Slits

An adult cuts the red lines with a craft knife. No knife? Fold the paper across the line and snip 4 mm in with scissors.

4 Snout

Fold the small arrow ⑥ on top of the snout backwards and push it into slit ⑥ in the face from the outside. The snout then hangs over the slit.

5 Feet

Push arrows ⑦ straight into the slits ⑦ low on the belly. The feet point forwards.

6 Make it round

Bend the body into a tube and push arrows ① through slits ① from the outside. Squeeze the arrowhead slightly – on the other side it springs open and holds.

7 Sit him down

Push arrows ③ at the bottom through the base slits ③ and fold them flat underneath.

8 Ears

Push arrows ⑤ down through the slits ⑤ in the head plate. The ears stand up.

9 Close the head

Fold the small tabs on the top edge inwards. Then fold the head plate back along the dashed line above the face, bend the tongue down at the back and push arrow ④ into slit ④ on the back.

10 Arms

Push arrow ② into the side slits ② from the outside. Done – Mork sits and stares.

Tip for parents: Print on 160–200 g/m² paper. Choose "Actual size / 100 %" when printing, otherwise arrows and slits won't fit. Keep the order: snout and feet first, while the tube is still open. Crafting fun from about age 5.